

Mrs. Gibson's mother told me that she knows that Mrs. Gibson stole a large pig from a colored woman named Russell and traded it for three little white pigs. She saw her son Willie and a man named Whittaker put the pig in a little wagon that they have for moving pigs and saw them leave the farm and sometime after saw them come back with the three little white pigs. They said they had traded the big pig for the little ones.

Mrs. Cerrinner said that on June 18th the baby girl was born. Mrs. Gibson sent her son Willie down to her house at 149 Sydam Street, New Brunswick and he said "Grandma, Mother wants you to come up to the farm - she just had a baby". He, Willie, drove Mrs. Cerrinner up to the farm in a little automobile in which they gather the swill. She sat in the front seat with Willie. When they got to the farm, Mrs. Gibson was in a little one room shanty near the front gate on the right side as you go into the driveway. She was lying in bed and the man, William Whittaker, was standing alongside of the bed. There was blood all around the bed. Mrs. Cerrinner said "Mary, what is the matter?" and Mrs. Gibson told her that she had just had a baby. Then Mrs. Cerrinner said, "What doctor did you have" and Mrs. Gibson answered by saying "I had no doctor or anyone, I just cut the string myself, like I cut the pigs". Mrs. Cerrinner then said to me, in relating what happened, "I picked the baby up and said that was no place for her and asked her why she hadn't stayed over in her house. She answered me by saying 'I did not want Bill to know anything, meaning Bill Easton, the man with whom
